Modern Dahlias

AMUN RA (Dec.). Immense decorative, resembling a glorious setting sun, unlike any color combination heretofore known to dahlias. The outer petals are a gorgeous shade of copper and orange, shading to gold and amber, merging at the center into a rich reddish bronze; one of the greatest dahlias of the day.

Price $10.00

EARL WILLIAMS (Dec.). Exceedingly large brilliant crimson, with white distributed through each petal. The flowers stand erect on long stiff stems. I consider this one of the most attractive of modern dahlias.

Price $7.50

J. W. DAVIES (Dec.). Deep shade of cerise at center, gradually shading to a lighter tint; a very large flower, holding size throughout season.

Price $6.00

LADY BETTY (Dec.). A creamy white, with a pink suffusion spread over the flower; large blooms on strong stems.

Price $6.00

OSAM. SHUDOW (Dec.). A large, heavy, loose petaled dahlia, with delightful colorings of old rose suffused with lilac, shading to yellow at center. A sturdy Grower.

Price $5.00

PAUL MICHAEL (Dec.). Incorrectly named California Gold. An immense flower of bright apricot with bronze shadings. Good stems; fine for exhibition.

Price $6.00

PEARL RUGGLES (Peony). One of the largest peony dahlias, carmine rose suffused with pink, shading lighter at tips, with distinct white at base. The petals twist and curl giving the flower a very charming effect.

Price $3.00

ROOKWOOD (Dec.). Pure bright cerise-rose; beautiful under artificial light. The blossoms are large and held high, on stiff stems, above the plants.

Price $8.00

SHUDOW'S LAVENDER (Dec.). An exquisitely beautiful combination of lavender and orchid pink. Flowers are large on long stems, held high above the foliage. One of the great prize winners among modern dahlias.

Price $8.00

THESE NINE MODERN DAHLIAS, $55.00

GREETING

It is with justifiable pride that I present to my friends and customers my nineteenth annual catalog. It contains the most complete list of up-to-date Dahlias that I have ever sent out.

Many varieties, listed previously, do not appear, having been replaced by better Dahlias, of recent creation and introduction. Dahlia lovers know that "not how many but how good" is the important consideration, whether varieties are grown for cut flowers, or for exhibition.

The novelties listed on pages 2 to 5 are among the best exhibition varieties grown today. My stock of some of them is very limited, because of many eager advance buyers last fall.

I desire to call particular attention to the Dahlias listed on pages 2 to 5. These have proven, both in the home garden and in the professional grower's field to be satisfactory in every respect.

I make no Dahlia exhibits at the Fall exhibitions, or force my plants to get flowers that are far above the average size for these displays. My plants are grown as nature grows them. Bulbs selected from such stock give the best of results.

I guarantee all tubers to be true to name, and to arrive in good growing condition. While I exercise the utmost care in handling my stock, errors may occur. In such a case I allow the purchaser equal value in tubers the following Spring. All prices are for strong, healthy tubers from field grown clumps. Remittances must accompany all orders, and the use of Post Office Money Orders is preferred. All orders will be shipped about the middle of May unless customers request otherwise at time of ordering.

I will be glad to answer any inquiries regarding Dahlia culture, the selection of varieties and choice of color.

GEORGE H. WALKER.

MADISON COOPER, Editor and Publisher, CALCIUM, N. Y.

THE FLOWER GROWER champions the cause of the summer garden flowers. It is published monthly and each issue abounds with helpful information on how to have the best of success with those increasingly popular flowers, the Gladiolus, the Peony, the Iris, the Dahlia, the Rose, etc. The Flower Grower should be in the hands of all who grow flowers.

The Flower Grower tells what sorts to grow, how and when to plant, when to cut the bloom for shipping and for home decoration, and how to save and store the seeds, bulbs, etc. In short, every phase of flower culture is taken care of, and practical facts and information on summer-flowering plants of all kinds comprises its contents. The magazine is a great contribution to the floral literature of the world.

Read Dahlia Culture before planting

Dahlia Culture

Dahlias do best in a light, porous soil, with good drainage. Wet feet are as fatal to them as to roses. While they will do fairly well in 25 per cent shade, an open location, in full sunshine, is much to be preferred. Do not have the soil too rich, for too much fertilizer, too much water, or too much shade, will cause the plants to grow tall and rank, but almost barren of blooms. Heavy clay soils should be made light and friable by adding ashes or sand, 40 per cent being none too much. Cultivation is everything with dahlias. Never allow the top of the ground to become hard and baked. Keep it finely pulverized with hoe or rake, particularly so during dry weather. In 1922 the season was a poor one for dahlias in many parts of the East, the weather being dry and hot. If your dahlias do not do well any year the weather may be to blame. Do not blame the grower from whom you bought your tubers. Your soil, your failure to cultivate often enough, plus your weather, may account for ill success. Do not plant too early, the tubers may rot during a cold wet spell. Plant six to seven inches deep, laying tuber flat, sprout side uppermost; cover two inches, and fill in the rest of the soil as the plant grows. This may keep tuber from rotting. Do not plant when the soil is sticky-wet after rains. Do not let fresh fertilizer touch the tuber. Use a cupful of bone meal to a plant, and if you add any barnyard manure to very infertile soil, be sure the manure is old, well-rotted, and mixed thoroughly in the soil. A small tuber is as good, often better, than a big one. Dahlias may be planted from the first of May to the first of July. June first is about right. The dahlia is an autumn flower and blooms best when the heat of August has passed away. Follow my suggestions, and write me of your success in the fall. I have far better success from plowing manure into the ground in the fall where it can decay all winter, and at planting time using only bone meal. In a very sterile soil, besides this a handful of commercial potato fertilizer could be added at planting time. Wood ashes scratched into the top soil (not over two inches, lest the roots be injured) when the flower buds show, will increase brilliancy of color of blooms and improve the tubers, for all root crops require potash. Flower buds usually appear in threes; pinch off two, leaving the largest one, and obtain much finer blooms. Scrape away enough earth to make a basin-shaped hollow two feet in diameter about each plant, sprinkle a generous handful of sheep or poultry manure; slowly pour in three buckets of water; fill the hollow with earth after the water disappears. Repeat this every ten days and your blooms will be large and fine. After frost kills the plants dig carefully lest the necks of the tubers be broken; dry half a day in the sun and air, and pack closely, stems downward, in paper lined barrels and boxes, covering top carefully with paper, and then with old rugs, or bags. The clumps of tubers must not dry out during the winter, or the buds will be injured, very probably killed. Look them over now and then, covering more carefully if need be, and scraping off all mold or rot that may develop. When you receive my tubers, unpack immediately, check up to verify order, and keep them in moist but not wet earth or sand till planted.
